They arrived in this country last fall and were placed in schools in Southern California in order that they might become gradually used to the climate. They will remain in St. Louis for the balance of August, and then will be sent to the several schools.

Colonel Mwards had thought of the country in the several schools.

August, and then will be sent to the several schools.

Colonel Edwards had thought of leaving a few in St. Louis, but that city does not appear on the list, though some are apportioned to the Missouri University at Columbia. It was sated at the office of Colonel Edwards to-day that the list is subject to change.

A second lot of Filipinos will arrive in this country next fail, but very likely will remain in California for the first winter.

As heretofore explained, after the Filipinos complete a four-year course in this country they will serve four years in the civil-service of the islands.

The snipes were carried into a hotel in this city one night in 1878 by W. C. Fredericks, now chief inspector of public works, and attracted the attention of Jeorge Graham Vest, late United States Senator, who was buried in Beliefontaine last week. The jack snipe answered the purpose of an introduction, and the two men were soon on friendly terms.

Fredericks, who had been all over the West, began telling Vest, who was a sportsman himself, of the wonderful country in Montana and other States, Vest a little later joined a party of hunters a little later joined a party of hunters at Omaha and personally inspected the country of which Fredericks told him. When he became a United States Senator one of the first things he did was to introduce a bill setting aside the Yellowstone district as a national park.

"George Vest was one of the most pleasent men to talk with I ever met." said Mr. Fredericks, in discussing the snipe incident. "I well remember my first meeting with him. It was the result of our mutual fondness for hunting and fishing. It was in the winter time and I had just entered the Saunders House, the best hotel in the city at that time, with a string of snipe which I had secured near what is now the stock yards and packing-house district.

"When I appeared with the game I noticed Mr. Vest eyeing me and the rnipe. He said nothing to me, and I went to my room. When I returned to the lobby Mr. Vest came over to me and asked:

"Are you not the man who had those snipe here awhile ago?"

in a minute. In the early days I had wan-dered much in the Western mountains. I had hunted and fished through Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona, and knew the country pretty thoroughly. When I began telling him of my trips he was all attention. We talked for hours.

"This was in 1878, and Mr. Vest had come to St. Joseph in behalf of his friend, Francis M. Cockrell, who was a candidate for the Senate. His mission was an important one politically, and he was booked to speak at a big meeting at the Courthouse. Fishing and hunting, however, proved too much for the sportsman. He forgot all about politics for the nonce. The meeting began, and the great speaker did not arrive. Another man was substituted, and a committee sent to the hotel to see what had become of Vest. This committee found us talking. They told him he was wanted at the Courthouse, and he replied, rather absent-mindedly, that he would be there in a very short time. We continued to talk.

"Five times the committees came for Mr. Vest and each time he promised to be there in a 'little while.' They held the meeting until late at night and maily had to close without him. In talking of my adventures I described the Yallowstone Park region and he seemed to be more interested in that than any of the Western country. He expressed a determination to go there as soon as possible.

"A little later I received a letter from him asking me to join a hunting party of which he was one at Omaha. He and his friends had started out to see for themselves if the wonderful stories I had told were true. It was impossible for me to accompany them, but Senator Vest and his friends went and were greatly pleased with terrip.

TEACHERS SCARCE IN EAST. Jersey City Classes May Be Taught by Pupils.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL New York, Aug. 20.—In his annual re-port, just published, City School Superin-tendent Snyder of Jersey City says that the fall opening of the public schools will be marked by a scarcity of teachers. The young women do not flock to the normal and training schools as they formerly did, and the supply of trained teachers does not begin to equal the demand Mr. Snyder says he will have to put pupil teachers in charge of some of the class teachers in charge of some of the class rooms.

Superintendent Poland of Newark is having the same experience. Superintendent Davey of East Orange is now scouring the country for qualified instructors for the schools in that town. The same complaint comes from the entire upper end of the State. As a result of these conditions school work in New Jersey may be seriously handicapped.

The State Normal School is in Trenton, and all its graduates are in demand in that section of the State, so that of the yearly graduates Northern New Jersey schools get few if any. Most of the cities maintain training schools of their own to meet the local demand. These schools were one overcrowded with pupils. Of late years, however, the young women have preferred other occupations, or, after teaching in New Jersey for a short time, have gone to other States.

GIRL DRIVES THIEVES FROM PARENT'S STORE

Burglars.

New York, Aug. 20 .- When three burglars laid careful plans to rob the till in the Berke leather store, at No. 427 West street, West Hoboken, little Agnes Berke entered into their calculations as just an ordinary child of 12, but with the quick-wittedness of a woman and the courage of a man the girl faced them alone and not only saved her father's money, but sent the would-be robbers away on the sent the would-be robbers away on the run.

Across the front of the store is a sign which reads "Rooms for Rent." A welidressed man came into the shop and said he wished to look at the rooms, which were in an adjoining block.

"Papa told me to go with the man and show him the rooms," said Agnes, "but the man said he might want to make rangements right away about moving in so papa said he would go with him and for me to watch the store carefully and not let burglars in, and I said I would.

"Papa and the man were hardly out of sight when another man with nice clothes and a straw hat came in and said he wanted some sole leather. Then another man came in and he was wearing winter clothes and a winter hat that weren't very nice, and he wanted me to come outside where he had some stuff that was to be mended. But I told him I couldn't, because I had to stay in the store.

"While he was begging me to come outside the other man started into the back room where papa's desk with his money in it was. Then I felt sure the men wanted to steal something, so I ran back and locked the desk and hid the key.

"The men both got mad then, and one of them started to choke me, but I broke away from him and ran to a shelf and said to them: "If you don't go out of here I will shoot you. My father's revolver is here and it is loaded." Then they stopped as if they didn' know whether it was true or not.

as if they didn' know whether it was true or not.

"It was only for a minute, but it gave me time to think about what to do, and I ran to the door and said: 'Oh, here comes papa now,' and how they scooted out of that store! He wasn't really coming, of course, but it's all right to tell a story to a burglar, isn't it if it keeps him from stealing your papa's money?

"When they were gone I felt just like I was going to faint, and I laughed and cried all at once, for I was awfully afraid all the time and I was just pretending to the burglars that I wasn't."

John Berke came in a few minutes later and heard the story between his little daughter's hysterical sobs. The desk in the back room contained almost 300.
